STORY TIME

The story of the woman who longs to write a book, starts off with the intuition to capture the fragments of her life. And so she wanders the world with an observative eye.

Experiencing minutes as if they are letters, hours forming the most extraordinary words, speaking her days in one sentence. Weeks making interesting paragraphs, months captured on a single page, years presenting the chapters.

A moment in time, she is reading between the lines of her life, that the book that she wanted to write, has really been a desire the entire time, to live the story of her life.

KNIT LIFE

Life as a knitting, she had learned to knit according to certain patterns. Could always look in the handbook, when she did not know which stitch was next to follow. Up until the day that she was dropping all of her stitches.

It felt like a relief to let go of all the rules on how to live and yet tensive at the same time. For in the absence of a manual, she had to decide everything by herself. Which yarns she would spin and what patterns she wanted to knit.

If only she knew who she would be once her knitting was finished, the choice would be easy. Instead she intuitively chooses the wool that fits her best in every moment, knits her life pattern with every single stitch.
